IV Read the following passage and answer the questions: 10 x 1 = 10

Honda Company is a leading automobile manufacturing company. If one traces the roots of this company, one can find the perseverance of a very simple and ordinary Japanese man named Honda.

Honda was a simple person. He attempted to design a new type of piston to improve the performance of cars. He was sure of himself that his attempt would yield pathbreaking results. He offered his designs to Toyota. The engineers turned his offer down without meeting him but he didn't lose heart. His repeated attempts at meeting Toyota engineers, finally succeeded, but only to see that his product was ridiculed by them. Not losing his heart he went into great details to convince them. At least he obtained an order to supply pistons to Toyota. Honda invested all his resources-money, materials, knowledge, hardwork as capital and constructed a plant for producing piston, suddenly there was an earthquake that destroyed his factory.

Yet Honda reposed faith in his own ability, once again he started construction afresh. When it was ready and the production was to start the following week, World War II broke out. Bombs bombarded Japan and most of the country was devastated and so was his factory.

Although Honda lost his factory, wealth and friends he did not lose his self-confidence. He said, "Yes, I lost everything but not my confidence." He continued his efforts and began to construct his factory for the third time.

Today Honda Car Company produces and sells more cars than Toyota.
